Making A Positive Difference In The Community

SAN IGNACIO TOWN, Cayo District, Wednesday, November 25, 2009:

While undesirable occurrences often dominate the media spotlight, all is not lost as there are others who, without much fanfare, are expending their energies in making a positive difference within the community. This weekend we came upon two such groups.

At the Santa Rita Cemetery in San Ignacio Town we met a group of students from Sacred Heart College painting the perimeter fence.

The group of 37 students from 2F along with their homeroom teachers, Mr. Alvin Medina and Ms. Catherine Wade took on the task as a community service project. They were having fun while making a positive contribution to the community.

Sacred Heart College students at work

Teacher Alvin Medina informed that as part of the school's program, each class is required to undertake a community project and his class chose to give the cemetery fence a much needed facelift.

Mr. Medina additionally informed that 10 gallons of paint were donated by Mayor John August and the Town Council

Perseverance on the part of Crime Stoppers is eventually paying off

In and of itself, a loaded gun is a dangerous instrument. In the wrong hands that gun becomes doubly dangerous, often times even deadly.

The value of success, through perseverance, was instilled in many of us from a very early age. Many of us might still recall the verse from the perseverance poem which encouraged us to “Try and try again, you will succeed at last”.

Crime Stoppers has been trying and trying for many years and by all indications it looks like they are succeeding at last.

One area of this success is obviously the removal of illegal guns off the streets and out of the hands of persons with criminal intent.

There are increasing instances when we hear on the news that: Acting upon information received police visited such and such location (usually an open/vacant lot) where they found a loaded gun. No arrest was made as there was no one in the area.

We said it, not in so many words, a few weeks ago but for some reason we are getting the feeling that the time has come for us to say it in as many words as is needed to get the message across.

Given Crime Stoppers' current rate of success in getting illegal guns off the streets, the long arm of the law WILL eventually grab those persons who insist on keeping illegal firearms.

There are those wise persons who, in the current absence of a cash-for-guns program, are increasingly ridding themselves of sure jail sentences by calling into Crime Stoppers the location of the illegal gun they once held and in the process they collect a reward.

Then there are those who are looking for illegal guns so that they can call in to Crime Stoppers to collect the reward.

There is the recent case where an illegal gun was sold. The buyer stashed the gun in his car for the return trip. The seller called in the report to Crime Stoppers and before the buyer could return home with the gun, the police met him on the way with the gun. The seller received payment for the gun and an additional bonus from Crime Stoppers and the buyer is in jail.

Then there is the other case where the illegal gun holder told one too many acquaintances about his illegal “treasure” and within a few hours the police were knocking at his door and without much difficulty went directly to the spot, in the house, where the gun was stashed. The acquaintance received the reward and the gunman is in jail.

To illegal gun holders we say, the choice is entirely yours: You can hold on to the gun until such time that the long arm of the law grabs you and you go to jail or you can direct Crime Stoppers to the location of the gun and collect the reward. Beyond any shadow of a doubt, it is neither safe to buy nor to keep an illegal gun.

Perseverance on the part of Crime Stoppers is eventually paying off and the sure product is the saving of lives as the effort continues to make Belize a safer place for all of us.

Citizens Still Seeking DOE and BECOL To Abide By The Law - Save Our River

BY: George & Candy Gonzalez
SAN IGNACIO TOWN, Cayo,
November 27, 2009:

Since June 2009, there has been even greater concerns about the quality of the Macal River waters and about how safe people are who live downstream of the dams.

Today most people do not feel we have gotten any believable answers from the authorities regarding the public's health and safety. Is it safe to drink the water? Is it safe to use the river? What do we do in case of a dam break? Is it safe to eat the fish from the river?

Belize Institute of Environmental Law and Policy (BELPO) acting on behalf of people and communities downstream of the dams agree that these questions remain unanswered.

BELPO filed an application for enforcement of the Court judgment of 2008 saying the Department of the Environment (DOE) and Belize Electric Company Ltd. (BECOL) have not fully complied with the decision of the Supreme Court (June 30, 2008) which calls for the DOE to monitor and enforce the Environmental Compliance Plan (ECP) for the Macal River Upstream Storage Facility (MRUSF), commonly known as the Chalillo Dam

The Court also ordered that a test, known as the taxa richness survey, be done that gives a good indication of water quality. BECOL admits they have not done this.

BECOL and DOE say they have an Emergency Warning System in place with a communication system to notify people of a dam break and it will be operating very soon. This is the same system that was to be completed before Chalillo went online, 4 years ago.

Since BELPO filed the Application, in late September, many of us started seeing signs in various places with an arrow and the words "Flood Route". BECOL says they will have meetings but all we have seen are signs and no explanations.

Join us at 9:00am on Wednesday, December 2, in the Supreme Court, Belize City, to hear arguments concerning compliance and non-compliance with the Court's orders on the enforcement of the Environmental Compliance Plan.

A Policeman’s View

Dear Editor,

It sometime seems like cops in the Belize Police Department are deem to destruction as each day they are ridiculed instead of being praised and honored for their bravery and heroism.

Perhaps this has come about from a curse, or could it be simply because of the lack of professional training at the inception and throughout the policing career.

This curse has too long plagued the chosen men and women of the department. Could this be the reason why some Police personnel have given in to corruption and brutalizing the people they should be protecting?

There are also those who have even gone to the extent of suffering amnesia during court trials.

Remember however that we are just men and women from different walks of life with similar temptations just like anyone else.

Each day officers leave their homes with the hope for a safe return but sometimes this is not the case as many are faced with deadly encounters, humiliation and degrading experiences.

Police officers play many roles. They are sometimes expected to be psychiatrists, psychologists and even Social Workers among many others. On a daily basis police officers listen and records all the tragic incidents within the community. As they absorbed these traumatic tales, they long for a release which today we see in the form of the ideology of the CURSE.

May I suggest that education is the magic spell to end this curse.

All officers should be equipped at the very beginning to meet the challenges and the many obstacle they are bound to face.

In the line of training, I think that interpersonal skills is a must, followed by psychology and ethical behavior that defines a career that must be praised and honored for the well being of our nation.

In concluding I say that we must be mindful of the great work police officers do. They often put their lives in danger in the line of fire and despair. Even though there are a few who are indeed untrue.

I hope that people at the very top can see the need for professional training, welfare and a little love and respect for the heroes that police officers truly are.

Sincerely Yours,
PC Omar Rodriguez
(Police Advocate)

Sunday, November 29, Is Election Day In Honduras

Honduras to vote for new president amid coup crisis

Thursday, November 26, 2009:

By Mica Rosenberg

TEGUCIGALPA (Reuters) -

Honduras chooses a new president on Sunday in an election that may defuse a crisis caused by a coup against President Manuel Zelaya, but the vote is splitting Washington and Latin America.

Neither Zelaya nor arch-rival Roberto Micheletti, the country's de facto leader, are running in the election, which could give a new president the chance to take Honduras beyond the political gridlock that has divided the Central American nation and cut off international aid.

"We see the running of these elections — assuming that they're run in a fair and transparent way — we see them as an essential part of the solution of this crisis," U.S. State Department spokesman Ian Kelly said this week.

Leftist Zelaya was ousted by the army in June and replaced by Micheletti who has blocked attempts backed by the United States, Latin America and Europe to have the president re-instated.

Zelaya — now holed up in the Brazilian embassy in Tegucigalpa — and his supporters argue that recognizing the elections would essentially give the coup leaders victory. Zelaya is urging the vote be rescheduled.

Latin American powers like Argentina and Brazil also say an election organized by Micheletti's de facto government is not valid, possibly putting them at odds with Washington which looks likely to recognize the vote.

The Organization of American States and the independent Carter Center are not sending observer missions. Human rights groups fear there could be violence.

The two leading candidates, from Honduras' traditional ruling elite, have skillfully avoided much talk of the crisis in their election campaigns and hope Honduras will be welcomed back into the international fold after the vote. Some analysts say under this scenario Zelaya would fade from the headlines.

Porfirio "Pepe" Lobo of the conservative opposition National Party, has emerged as the frontrunner in the election, scheduled before the June 28 coup.

In an October poll by CID-Gallup, Lobo was 16 points ahead of his closest rival, Elvin Santos from Zelaya and Micheletti's Liberal Party.

A wealthy landowner who lost the 2005 election to Zelaya, Lobo is seen backing investment-friendly policies if he wins.

"Today begins the turning of a new page in Honduran history. We should leave behind differences and unite together to look forward," Lobo said at a closing rally in the capital this week jazzed up by thumping music and dancing girls.

Many Hondurans are tired of the crisis and want to move on. "(Micheletti and Zelaya) caused this problem and the people are the ones suffering ... The vote is our only way out of this," said engineer Hector Guzman, 48, at the Lobo rally.

International lenders slashed aid to the poor coffee - and textile-exporting country and the Organization of American States suspended Honduras to punish the coup leaders.

VOTE WORRIES

Honduras' Supreme Court said on Wednesday in a non-binding opinion that Zelaya cannot legally return to office, dimming the possibility of his reinstatement, court sources said.

When in power, Zelaya crossed Congress, the Supreme Court and the military with a bid to change the constitution.

Critics say he wanted new rules to stay in power, but he denies this.

Security forces have repeatedly cracked down on anti-coup protests, causing several deaths, and some observers say a fair vote is greater relevance to readers.

The Magazine has a readership of approximately 308,000 per issue and has received many accolades for its award-winning writing and world renowned photography.

San Ignacio Humane Society's Successful Event

BY: Cynthia Reece
SAN IGNACIO TOWN, Cayo,
November 27, 2009:

The San Ignacio Humane Society sponsored a successful fundraising event at Mahogany Hall Boutique Resort in Bullet Tree Falls on Saturday evening, November 21.

Members of the Society and the public were invited to a pre-Thanksgiving dinner on the banks of the Mopan River at Paslow Falls for a donation of $50 a plate.

The event was to raise funds to support spay and neuter clinics for dogs and cats and to sustain the recently established Donna Hill Animal Adoption Center.

Veterinary Drs. Isabelle Paquet-Durand and Edwardo Tesecum were honored guests for the event as the Society showed its appreciation for all the work they do to support the efforts to reduce unwanted and mistreated animals in the Twin Town area and surrounding villages.

Dr. Tesecum has started a clinic for spay and neutering, every third Saturday of the month, with discounts on the fees, at his office on Joseph Andrews Drive in San Ignacio, next to Sacred Heart College.

Dr. Isabelle is a well known wildlife vet, who has recently initiated the Wildlife Conservation Network in Belize.

Both Dr Tesecum and Dr Isabelle teach through Galen University's Summer Intensive Field Courses, which do free vet clinics during the summer months, supporting the Society's efforts to reach out to the community.

The wonderful Thanksgiving fair was prepared by the Humane Society Board members and their families.

Turkey, ham, dressing, all the "fixings" and pies were served to the guests by the Junior members of the Humane Society volunteers.

Funds were also raised through donations and a cash bar at the beautifully decorated resort. People attended the fundraiser to show their support for the efforts that the Humane Society is making in the community; some came for the food and many attended to get firsthand appreciation of the newly Tree.

Guided tours of the resort were provided by the staff. Music was provided by the Society volunteers.

Dining tables were scattered across the large deck with the lovely flowing fountain and pool, huge entrance hall and lounge with a fireplace. The variety of guests and conversation was a delight throughout the evening extra servings were packaged for guests to take home.

The next Humane Society event will be held Saturday, December 5, at Erva's Restaurant on West Street, San Ignacio, at 1 pm. This will be a General Meeting for all members and elections will be held for a new slate of officers to manage the affairs of the Society for the coming year. The public is invited to attend and join. Membership is only $20 per person.

The San Ignacio Humane Society extends a heartfelt Thank You to all those persons who attended last Saturday's event and assisted in making it the success it was. Thank you so very much.

Granny Gloria is well known for her unshakable faith in the Almighty and for her vocal proclamation of her faith.

She would routinely go out on the front porch of her house in Santa Familia Village and proudly shout, "Praise the Lord!"

Mr. Dennis, the next door neighbor would shout back, "There ain't no Lord!"

Realizing that Granny Gloria was poor and in need, Mr. Dennis decided to prove his point by buying a large bag of groceries and placing it at her door.

Early the next morning, Granny Gloria opened the door, stepped on the porch, and on seeing the large bag of groceries at her feet, she raised her hands to the sky and shouted, "Praise the Lord!"

Mr. Dennis stepped out from behind a tree and said, "I am the one who brought those groceries, there ain't no Lord."

Granny Gloria raised her eyes to the heavens and replied, "Lord, you not only sent me food but you made the devil pay for it."

Mind Over Matta

A retired businessman was on a photo safari in the Cockscomb Jaguar Preserve along with his aged potlicker dog.

The dog started chasing butterflies and before long it strayed from its owner. Wondering about in the jungle, the dog notices a jaguar heading rapidly in his direction with the intention of having him for lunch.

The old potlicker says, "Oh, oh! I'm in trouble now!" Noticing some bones on the ground close by, he immediately settles down to chew on the bones with his back to the approaching jaguar. Just as the jaguar was about to leap, the old dog exclaims loudly, "Boy, that was one delicious jaguar! I wonder if there are any more of them around here"

Hearing this, the young jaguar halts his attack in mid-strike, a look of terror comes over him and he slinks away into the trees.

"Whew!" says the jaguar, "That was close! That old dog nearly had me!"

Meanwhile, a spider monkey who had been watching the whole scene from a nearby tree figures he can put this knowledge to good use and trade it for protection from the jaguar. So off the monkey goes, but the old dog sees him heading after the jaguar with great speed. The dog figures that something must be up and so he follows from a safe distance. The monkey soon catches up with the jaguar, spills the beans and strikes a deal for himself with the jaguar.

The young jaguar is furious at being made a fool of and says, "Here, monkey, hop on my back. I want you to see what's going to happen to that conniving old dog!"

The dog was rushing back in search of a safe haven when he sees the jaguar coming with the monkey on his back and he says to himself, "What am I going to do now?" He halts and decides to take this one like a man. He sits down with his back to the approaching attackers, pretending he hasn't seen them yet, and just when they got close enough to hear, the old dog says.

"Where's that darn monkey? I sent him off an hour ago to bring me another Jaguar!"

Moral of the story:

Wisdom comes with age.

Economic Crisis Explodes Into Unrest In Puerto Rico

BY: Juan A. Ocasio Rivera
SAN JOSE, Puerto Rico, November 18, 2009:

The unsuspecting governor, smack in the middle of an important press conference, missed being hit by a projectile by mere inches.

The projectile? Not a bullet, but an egg. An outraged citizen calling himself "the Common Guy" (el tipo común) interrupted the press conference by screaming in outrage at Puerto Rico's governor, Luis Fortuño, and throwing a slider that landed on a sign highlighting a new development project the governor was announcing. As officers locked the man in a bear hug and carted him off, and as the press swarmed this Common Guy, it became clear that his public display of resistance was not only transcendental for its raw expression of pain and anger, but was also symbolic and representative of everyone's frustration and open outrage at the turn of events on the island.

Governor Luis Fortuño (R)

Puerto Rico is witnessing the kind of social, economic, and political upheaval not seen in decades. Declaring a fiscal emergency, the pro-statehood Fortuño administration recently passed a Fiscal Emergency Law, which, among other measures, implemented the layoff of over 20,000 government workers—nearly 10% of the total. In addition to huge cuts in budgets and services, the layoffs caused immediate shock and outrage due to its massive breadth and potential effects. Government officials contend that they inherited a bankrupt government from previous administrations along with a huge debt load. They are scrambling to prevent their credit ratings to be classified in the lowest of categories—the junk rating—and contend that the measures were necessary.

With an unemployment rate of around 16%, it is obvious that Puerto Rico confronts a serious economic crisis.

Coupled with a soaring crime rate—more than 750 murders this year alone—alarming suicide rates, increasing acts of domestic violence, and worrisome mental health needs on the island, emotions have reached a boiling point. Ordinary citizens have begun to express the belief that their government cannot control the social crisis.

Incidents of police abuse, including a recent incident in which university students were indiscriminately attacked with batons and tear gas, are being denounced at an increasing rate across the island. Squatter communities (also known as developers of rescued lands) have recently been targeted as lawbreakers by the conservative administration, and families without clear title to their properties are being forcibly evicted from their homes.

Part of the government's fiscal emergency response has been an attempt to reverse the gains previously won by collective bargaining agreements, drawing a sharp outcry from the union sector. Opposition political parties have called for a larger burden to be borne by the rich and by large corporations, only to be rebuked by the administration, which has gone ahead with significant increases in basic services. The administration, whose governor identifies himself as a U.S. Republican, also censured several books by renowned authors for use in the island's schools—including Antología personal by José Luís González, El entierro de Cortijo by Edgardo Rodríguez Juliá, and Aura by Carlos Fuentes - a deed met with fierce opposition. A further alarming development was the governor's signing of an executive order authorizing the police superintendent to activate the National Guard to quell public disturbances and civil unrest—an act undertaken immediately before the announcement of the layoffs.

Activists from across the political spectrum joined forces to confront the fiscal emergency law and called for a national strike that was held this past October 15. The coalition, known as All Puerto Rico For Puerto Rico (TPRPR), is made up of political organizations, student groups, and civic and religious organizations, including churches. Among its more publicly recognizable activists are priests and labor leaders.

Reverend Juan Vera, of the TPRPR Coalition, is seen by most as one of the main organizers of the coalition. He declared, during one of the massive demonstrations linked to the national strike, that

"the streets will be our battleground. We declare that there will only be tranquility when our governors respect the will of the people. Today we begin a new page in the history of Puerto Rico."

The demonstrations on October 15th, which garnered approximately 200,000 people, were centered in the San Juan area, and focused principally on the largest avenues in the area known as the Ponce de Leon. Schools in the area were closed, government offices were at a standstill, and public transportation was halted. Remarkably, the largest shopping mall in the Caribbean, Plaza Las Americas, closed for the day, only the second time in its history, leading some to claim that the national strike had the desired effect of crippling business for the day. Others hoped publicly that the government would change course once confronted with the growing demands for alternative solutions.

Special police intelligence units were deployed, and Police Superintendent José Figueroa Sancha confirmed that activists were recorded for "intelligence purposes," drawing an outcry from rights activists. Figueroa Sancha, previously second-in-command of Puerto Rico's FBI office, has been implicated in the agency's targeted assassination of revolutionary leader Filiberto Ojeda Rios in 2005. Ojeda Rios was the de facto leader of Los Macheteros, an anti-colonial guerrilla force advocating Puerto Rico's political independence. He had been wanted by the FBI for 15 years, having gone underground in 1990 after the infamous $7 million Wells Fargo heist by his organization in 1983.

Los Macheteros have reappeared during the current unrest, issuing a statement on September 23 calling for struggle and for solidarity with the affected working class, warning that the government's fiscal measures were designed to satisfy the needs of corporations and to further the statehood goals of the governor. The pro-independence guerrillas called for "firm, effective, and coordinated actions" designed "to evolve into revolutionary action" in order to obtain necessary democratic, labor, and political rights. Calling for all pro-independence forces to unite, the organization reiterated its position and intent to utilize armed struggle as simply one of the methods of struggle alongside the Puerto Rican working class.

At one point during the October 15 protests in San Juan, several hundred students spontaneously conducted an act of disobedience, stealing the media limelight. Ordered by the police to disperse, the students suddenly decided to resist the order and promptly sat down in the middle of "Las Americas" Expressway, one of the largest highways in the country. Blocking traffic for five hours, the students chose to display their militancy and strength by sending a message in action to the current administration. The students haggled with the authorities for hours, insisting that the police leave the area first, while the police ordered the students' dispersal as a condition. The tension was finally broken when nationalist icon Rafael Cancel Miranda arrived to speak with the students, and officers themselves began to disperse.

Revolutionary Leader
FILIBERTO OJEDA RIOS
Assassinated in 2005

Cancel Miranda was one of four Puerto Ricans who opened fire in the U.S. Congress in 1954 in a dramatic demand for the island's independence, serving 25 years in federal prison until President Carter's clemency in 1979. The FUPI (Pro-Independence University Federation) released a statement after the demonstrations praising the militancy of the students and the presence of Cancel Miranda. The statement highlighted the fact that the students present "recognized him and listened to him, because Rafael Cancel Miranda has the moral stature necessary to be heard. It is indicative of the students' recognition of our people's true leaders, who with their lives have demonstrated commitment" and acted honorably.

Days after the National Strike, members of the Hostosian National Independence Movement (MINH) surprised the governor as he arrived at a political party meeting in the town of Toa Baja. Pro-independence activists, labor leaders, and ordinary citizens who had been laid off via the Fiscal Emergency Law all participated in the MINH demonstration. In the days and weeks following those actions, the governor and his entourage have been met with consistent and repeated demonstrations, protests, and acts of civil disobedience. These acts are conducted by different organizations, with different interests, and different constituencies, but have all been coordinated by the coalition and brought together by labor leaders. They all continue to demand the cancellation of the layoffs and of the Fiscal Emergency Law. Pro-independence student activists have indicated that they will now begin a campaign to demand "more," an ominous though unclear warning. In recent days, union leaders have led visits and sit-ins at several offices of elected officials in order to pressure for changes to the Fiscal Emergency Law and continue to confront the governor at every turn.

In the days after the demonstrations, the governor declared that he would not reverse the layoffs and would not repeal any of the provisions of the Fiscal Emergency Law. In response, student organizations and labor leaders expressed their intention to move forward with a general strike, one that would be held indefinitely, designed to bring the country to a standstill, with the political purpose of forcing the administration to roll back some of the harsher measures contained in the Fiscal Emergency Law.

Meanwhile, Fortuño continues to misstep and provoke the growing activist movement. During the last days of October, he cancelled the Natural Reserve designation of hundreds of acres of land that were to be protected from contamination and development. The removal of protection was opposed by environmentalists, who saw it as a capitulation to development interests. The explosion of unrest on the island will likely deepen as ordinary citizens identify and oppose the privatization efforts of the administration.

The Common Guy and his egg did not constitute the only explosion on the island. On October 21, an explosion occurred in the Gulf gasoline refinery owned by Caribbean Petroleum Corporation (CAPECO) in the town of Bayamon, drawing a frenzy of media coverage and frantic conjecture by officials in the Fortuño administration about whether it was an act of sabotage. The fire burned for three days, spewing thick black toxic smoke that, luckily, was mostly blown out to sea by wind gusts. The explosion was so severe that it marked 2.8 on the Richter scale, blowing out windows in local homes and business, and seriously damaging several homes in the area. Residents pointed out that at midnight the explosion lit up the sky as if it were noon, and were amazed, frightened, and traumatized by the severity of the blast.

Those who opposed a hated development project in the town of Peñuelas likely feel vindicated. The "Gasoducto," recently abandoned, was a development project designed to transport natural gas throughout the southernmost towns of the island, but met with unusually fierce community opposition, most especially in the towns of Ponce and Peñuelas. Anti-gasoducto arguments were based on the fact that the gas line was to come dangerously close to residential areas, and activists called attention to serious accidental blasts in other countries where gas lines are maintained.

The CAPECO blast was a haunting reminder that overdevelopment coupled with a lack of oversight and regulation is a serious threat to civilian safety in residential areas. But it gave the administration an opportunity to attempt to link the blast to the growing protest movement. In spite of having immediate confirmation from CAPECO employees who reported seeing dangerous flammable vapors being emitted from the oil and gasoline transfer stations, and who ran from the site in anticipation of the blast—and luckily were not hurt because they fled in vehicles and not on foot—the administration, along with FBI officials, continued for days to report that they could not rule out "terrorism" and "sabotage" as a possible cause of the blast. Some saw this as a feeble attempt to weaken the protest movement by attempting to scare more moderate elements of the organizations involved and so prevent further unrest. Within days, firefighters were able to contain the blaze and extinguish it, and the FBI confirmed no evidence of sabotage was found, instead finding a history of neglect and corruption.

Working class families have been shocked into action by the neoliberal policies of the Fortuño administration, and have taken to public demonstrations and civil disobedience to attempt to roll back some of its more painful policies. While corporations continue to repatriate billions of dollars to their U.S. offices, and while elected officials continue to pay six figures to consultants and authorize salary increases for themselves, the working class in Puerto Rico has exploded in outrage and action. While it may not result in immediate fundamental political change, it certainly marks an exciting and historical moment in the history of the United States' oldest colony.

Sunday, November 29, Is Election Day In Honduras

impossible after Micheletti temporarily shut down pro-Zelaya news channels.

When soldiers roused Zelaya from his bed at dawn and sent him to Costa Rica on a military plane, it conjured up memories of Central America's dark Cold War past when military leaders often backed by the United States overthrew democratic governments.

Zelaya told Reuters this week it would be undemocratic if the United States ended up backing the result of an election held by a post-coup government, since coup leaders supported the vote from day one.

"The U.S. position ... has divided the Americas and is creating a grave precedent," Zelaya said.

Micheletti and his supporters accuse Zelaya of getting too close to Venezuela's socialist President Hugo Chavez.

But the rancher and logging magnate is an unlikely working-class hero who some say did little to systematically improve the lot of Honduras' poor while in power.

while the remainder was purchased with funds raised by the students while several students each donated a gallon of paint for the project. By the time the students left, a few hours later, the positive difference was visible for all to see.

Then on Sunday morning we saw of group of men, with trash bags in hand, collecting the garbage on both sides of the Western Highway in Santa Elena Town. We later found out that these civic minded men were not Town Council employees but rather members of the Cayo Tour Guide Association who took time off this Sunday morning to make a positive difference in their community.

Another equally civic minded group is the San Ignacio Humane Society whose members, mostly businesspersons and private citizens, are volunteering their time, energy and financial resources to care for stray dogs and cats in the community.

We congratulate these positive minded citizens and encourage more of us to join in the effort at making a positive difference in these challenging times.
